Precautionary inspection call for crimping sleeves

For more than 100 years, A.Haberkorn stands for outstanding quality in all its production areas, which is ensured not only by external audits and certifications, but also by internal quality controls and routine inspections.

During one such routine inspection, a non-conforming crimping was detected in a product from our EDGER series.

After discovering this deviation from the standard, A. Haberkorn immediately initiated a complete investigation and quality control of this process and subjected the entire stock to a 100% inspection. No further deviations from the standard were found during this inspection.

Although we were unable to detect any further deviations from the standard, our own claim obliges us to take the measure of a precautionary product inspection in order to rule out any possibility of a deviation.

As a possible non-conforming crimping is easily recognizable for the user, a general return of the product is not necessary.

Customers and end users are therefore requested to identify their purchased products with the article numbers listed below for the product groups check the crimping sleeve as follows:

In general, check whether the crimping is round or oval. If it is round, it is a standard-compliant crimping and nothing further needs to be done. If it is oval, there may be a deviation from the standard. The pictures below show exactly what the crimping must look like and what diameter it must have.
